Kurtz is 'old fossil' namesake

It's flattering to have something named in your honor--a building perhaps, a scholarship, or even a child. But one UTPB professor has the distinction of being the namesake of an "old fossil."

The professor is Prof. Edwin B. Kurtz, chairman of life science, and the "old fossil" is Kurtzipites, a fossil pollen.

The Kurtzipites story began in 1960 when a former student of Kurtz's discovered the fossil pollen. Discoverer Roger Anderson, named the pollen to honor Kurtz because of all of his help while Anderson was a graduate student at The University of Arizona, thus beginning the saga.

Kurtzipites, because it is a fossil pollen, was around long before Prof. Kurtz came into being. As a matter of fact, the Kurtzipites-producing plants seem to have become extinct at the end of the early Paleocene period.

Kurtz noted that even today little is known about the pollen. Even the plant from which it comes is not known, but Kurtzipites is known as a strong reference pollen.

"The pollen grain doesn't decompose for one thing. A rock can be dissolved and the pollen grain will still remain," Kurtz stated.

Since 1960, other researchers found a similar pollen, and not knowing that it already had a namesake, attached different names to it. Thus, it became known by several alias names. In 1961, the pollen was named Fibulapollis; in 1965 it took the name of Aenigmapollis. Another researcher in 1969 named the pollen Coriaripites, and later in 1970 it was named Aguilapollenites.

Kurtz stated that this was not unusual. "Researchers all over the world make discoveries and name those discoveries. In other words, one researcher would not realize that the pollen had been discovered by someone else," he explained.

Scientists reveal the little pollen known by so many names has made its mark on many parts of the world. According to the July 1981 issue of the "Journal of Paleontology," the fossil pollen has been found in Alberta and southern Saskatchewan, Canada; South Dakota, Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, Texas, British Columbia and Arctic Canada. Outside North America, Kurtzipites has been reported from sediments of the eastern USSR and Japan.

With all this notoriety, would Kurtzipites retain its original name? Or would it lose its identity to one of the other namesakes?

The final job was up to taxonomy. Taxonomists took each discovery and weighed its similarities and differences in order to class the genus. Kurtzipites had top priority. It might be said it's the big daddy, or the head of the family. Kurtzipites is now classified as a genus. The other names are members of the Kurtzipites genus and will be classified as species under the genus of Kurtzipites.

Outstanding students, prof recognized at convocation

Top students in UTPB's class of 1982 and the university's most outstanding professor were recognized at the sixth annual honors convocation recently.

Prof. James L. "Ray" LeGrande, co-ordinator of criminal justice management, was the recipient of the $1,000 Amoco Foundation Award for Excellence in teaching.

LeGrande, a faculty member here since May, 1978, has worked with several police departments both as an officer and administrator. He has been a public prosecutor and taught at Michigan State University and Florida International University before taking his current position at UTPB.

He holds a bachelor of science degree in business from Central State University in Edmond, Oklahoma., and a Juris Doctorate from the College of Law at the University of Oklahoma. He has been a member of the Oklahoma Bar Association, The Missouri Bar Association, the Florida Bar and the State Bar of Texas.

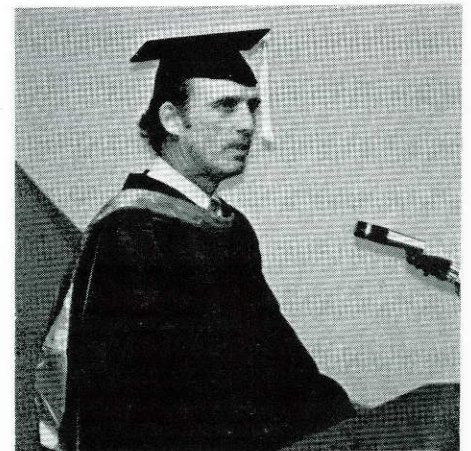

Student recognition was given to top graduates in each academic discipline and to others who had proven themselves academically. Among those recognized were students listed in "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges," honor society members, scholarship awardees and students listed on the dean's honor lists for the past year.

Students will have the opportunity this summer to once again combine study and travel. The final destination is Mexico City, after three weeks of study 5:30-8:30 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays, beginning June 1.

The course, Univ. 489.01, The Panorama of Mexico, can be taken for three hours of undergraduate or graduate credit in history or literature. The course can also be taken through ENCORE, the no-grade option to learning.

Professors Frank N. Samponaro, and Genaro J. Perez, literature, will be co-teaching the course. "Before the trip, scheduled June 18-June 21, we will be studying the history and literature of Mexico," Samponaro stated.

"Students who participated in the trips to Merida or Spain are eligible to take this course for credit, since the subject matter is different," he noted.

He noted another trip is already being planned for future semesters to include visits to Peru, France, or Italy.

The approximate cost of the trip is $450, which includes round trip airfare

'Friends' study underway

A study sponsored by the "Friends of UTPB" on how the university can best meet the needs of the area is expected to be complete by early June.

A. K. Barlow, Chairman of the "Friends of UTPB," an organization of Permian Basin residents who support four-year status for the university, said the two-man consulting team visited in the area during the first part of April to look at the total education picture in the area, including high schools, community colleges and the university.

"They are considering whether there is a need for four-year status, but that is not all they are studying. They are considering the demand for various educational programs and will make recommendations concerning alternatives to better meet the needs of the population. They are considering how the university can work in coordination with other educational institutions to provide a quality education here," Barlow said.

Members of the consulting team are Dr. Harold Enarson of Boulder, Colo., president emeritus of Ohio State University, and Dr. Paul Sharp of Norman, Okla., president emeritus of Oklahoma University.

"We wanted professional help of the highest credentials to help us in the planning for the future of UTPB, and after a great deal of research, we decided on these two men. They have vast experience in higher education and are well respected in this field," Barlow said.

He said the "Friends of UTPB" also are involved in other activities in support of the university. "We are now in the process of soliciting a larger membership who will agree to support UTPB in a meaningful way. We are asking them to use their time, talents and influence on our behalf," he said.

"The 'Friends of UTPB' believe the university should be four-year because we think it will best meet the needs of the area as a full-curriculum university. To this end, we are working to gain support of various groups," he added

He said several committees are now working within the organization to accomplish this support. Included are committees soliciting support of all communities in the Permian Basin, and committees for support of the UTPB ex students, community colleges, the UT System Board of Regents, the state Coordinating Board, the legislature, governor, and governor's task force on higher education among others.

*Much

There is much to remember and more to look forward to as the fun winds down for final exams May 10 14.

Back home, the traditional chili cook-off was a part of the second annual campusfest activities. The pizza eating contest brought new meaning to the word "agony," and the grand winners of the week-long campusfest activities celebrated their victory.

The UTPB student Senate will sponsor its second student faculty happy hour from 5-9 p.m. April 29 in the coffeehouse. Musical entertainment will feature local guitarist and singer Bill Irwin.

"The French Lieutenant's Woman" is the popular movie from the best John Fowles novel of the same name, scheduled at 7:30 p.m. April 30 in the student lounge cinema area.

Constructed as a film within a film, the movie stars Meryl Streep as a 20th century actress portraying Sara Woodruff, a mysterious 19th century woman. Viewers watch as Sara's torment curiously parallels that of her modern-day counterpart. It is beautifully photographed film of a romance in Victorian England.

The event is free to students, staff with ID's and their Newspaper accounts of the sinking and the assassination of President Lincoln are just part of the newspaper display currently on exhibit in The University of Texas of the Permian Basin student lounge.

The exhibit features newspaper clippings of the Chicago Daily, New York Herald, The Los Angeles Times, and the New York Times, all covering important dates in history.

Prof. Robert N. Rothstein, director of communications, said the exhibit is sponsored by the UTPB faculty of communications. "The display in the Los Angeles Times accounts for the declaration of peace in 1918 to the story of men walking on the moon in the New York Times," he said.

The exhibit is free and open to the public.

An exhibition featuring the works of Midland art senior Susan Randle, currently on exhibit in the third-floor gallery, will remain open through May 15.

Randle's exhibition, featuring portraits, abstract paintings and drawings, is part of her requirement for graduation as a studio art major. She is responsible for all areas of planning and hanging the exhibition.

The exhibition is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

The UTPB chapter of Phi Alpha Theta international history honor society will conduct its annual initiation ceremony at 8 p.m. April 30 in the Devonian Room.

Prof. Frank Samponaro, history, faculty adviser for the society, said initiation into the society serves as recognition of meritorious academic achievement in the study of history.

Odessa students to be initiated include Victoria Head, government senior; Jeffrey Townsend, government junior; Deborah Pellikan, history junior; Charles Russell, government junior; William Rutherford, history graduate; Beverly Woods, history junior; Candace Cunningham, literature senior; Kelly Hunter, history senior and Donna Troughber, math senior.

Alumni Director Woody Kupper said the Alumni Association board of directors has been planning the event with expectations of having a full house of alumni, graduates and faculty.

The theme of this year's celebration is "The Future of UTPB." Guest speaker will be Jim Reese, former mayor of Odessa.

Reese is a member of the "Friends of UTPB Committee" organized to promote the change for UTPB to four-year status. He will discuss committee activities, progress and planned programs for the campaign of developing the university into a four-year school. He will outline the developments since the "Friends of UTPB" made their first presentation to The University of Texas System Board of Regents here in December.

New officers for the 1982-83 year will be elected and the Alumnus of the Year Award will be presented.

Campus park on agenda

The University of Texas System Board of Regents meeting in Houston recently approved a lease contract with Ector County for location of a park on the University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus.

The park, consisting of about 25 acres on the northeast corner of the campus, is made possible under a lease for a term of 10 years and is to be automatically expanded for successive 10 year periods unless the county chooses to terminate the lease. The university also can terminate the lease after the initial 10 year period by giving a year's notice, if the area is required for campus use.

Improvements on the site will be made at the expense of the county. Plans call for $200,000 in initial improvements, with an additional $176,000 to be spent during the following two years.

Regents previously approved a lease to Ector County for installation of softball playing fields. The new park will be located adjacent to the softball fields.

Regents also granted an underground pipeline easement to Getty Oil Company for the purpose of laying, constructing, operating and maintaining pipelines at the site of proposed State Highway 191. The area is located on the northeast side of the UTPB campus near Loop 338.

In addition, Regents approved a budget of $245,887 for faculty salaries for the 1982 summer session budget, and approved an agreement between the state Coordinating Board and UTPB providing internships for UTPB criminal justice students.

The intern program, funded at $2310 for the period of Jan. 11 - May 28, 1982, is under direction of Prof. J. L. "Ray" LeGrande, coordinator of criminal justice management. Under the auspices of the Texas Statewide Corrections Intern Program, it is an ongoing program at UTPB whereby criminal justice students receive practical training with area corrections agencies.
